HOW IT ALL BEGAN

The late Lloyd Miller, Jr., a respected social studies teacher at NPHS, suggested at the last NPHS Awards night he attended in 1990 before his untimely death, that efforts should be made to establish an academic booster club at the school.

In 1992, after the fire that destroyed much of the high school, Randy Gibbs ('69), assistant principal at Welty Middle School, had the idea to sell imprinted bricks to put in the new construction sidewalk and went to Karen Jenkins, Assistant Superintendent, with the idea. When they discussed how they would use the money from the sales, Mrs. Jenkins thought of Mr. Miller's suggestion and The Quaker Foundation was born.

Randy and Karen approached Richard Stephenson ('51), an attorney, who thought the plan was long past-due. He shared the idea with his former classmate, Orley Herron ('51), president of the National-Louis University, who also gave strong encouragement to the formation of the Foundation.

Dick Stephenson provided the legal expertise to incorporate the organization and drafted the code of regulations which directs the efforts of the Foundation. Members of the community were then approached and a board of directors was assembled. Everyone contacted to participate in the work of the foundation has shared the same great enthusiasm about the project, and as they say . . . the rest is history.
